

A Dossier on
New Construction North of Kashgar, Xinjiang, China
39.6 N, 76.1 E

Summary: Beginning in the first half of 2011 and proceeding rapidly through that year and into 2012, a series of large structures of unknown purpose was built along the foot of a ridge 15 kilometers to the northeast of Kashgar. This dossier is intended to document that construction using available imagery in the hopes that its purpose can be determined.

Part III

New Road and Possibly Related Facility

Facility immediately to the northwest of the Kashgar airport at the end of the existing road. The sinuous tracks are typical of training courses for drivers of heavy vehicles.

Close-up of south-east track showing several vehicles on the course. The two vehicles to the right appear to be 8 or 9 meters long as measured in Google Earth.
